SedonaOffice 101 Overview

SedonaOffice 101 provides general application navigation information. This section is particularly helpful for new Users to the SedonaOffice application. SedonaOffice 101 should be considered required reading for all new Users to SedonaOffice.

Once a User has logged into the SedonaOffice application, the User will be presented with a main application menu tree, and application options. Since each User is set up with particular User privileges, the main application menu tree will only display the options for which the User's User Group has been granted permissions. The illustrations provided are shown with Administrative permissions; all possible application options are displayed.

The SedonaOffice application is divided into three major elements:

- Application Menu
- Function Buttons
- Main Application Menu

Each major element is listed as a sub-topic of SedonaOffice 101.